

NORTHERN ARIZONA UNIVERSITY

College of Engineering & Natural Sciences

Lecturer in Applied Geophysics

The Geology Department at Northern Arizona University invites applications for an academic year appointment as a Lecturer in Applied Geophysics, beginning in August, 2008. The successful candidate will teach senior and graduate level courses in applied geophysics and GIS, and courses in introductory geology appropriate to their background. This position is funded for 2008-2009 academic year and is not tenure eligible. Minimum qualifications are ABD in Geophysics or related discipline and teaching experience and evidence of teaching effectiveness. Preferred qualifications are an earned Ph.D. in Geophysics or related discipline, strong background in applied geophysics, academic preparation and research interests in applied geophysics, and a commitment to working effectively within a diverse university community.

Faculty in the Department of Geology are committed to teaching and research excellence and to providing traditional and nontraditional educational experiences in the classroom, field, and laboratory. Bachelor and Master of Science degrees are offered. Departmental analytical and technical capabilities are numerous and state-of-the-art, and include both field and laboratory equipment. Northern Arizona University is a 21,500-student institution with its main campus in Flagstaff, a four-season community of about 60,000 at the base of the majestic San Francisco Peaks. The university is committed to a diverse and civil working and learning environment.

Applicants must send a letter of application describing professional goals, teaching experience, and evidence of teaching effectiveness (e.g., teaching evaluations), a curriculum vita, and contact information for three references to Dr. David Brumbaugh, Department of Geology, Northern Arizona University, Flagstaff, AZ 86011-4099. Visit the University Website at <http://hr.nau.edu/m/> for a full position description and application instructions. This position will be open until filled or closed. Review of applications will begin on 07/15/08.